"Who are they?" I asked.

"Who are they?" I asked.

"Ob, they have been in town about a week. They are at Tomlinson,s and they drive a beautiful pair of blacks in a light wagon.

"But who are they? I declare, Mollie, you never stop talking long enough to asy anything."

Mollie laughed. She has the sweetest temper—and did stop a moment.

"They are"—she said slowly—"oh, I don't know who they are, except just the Chidester brothers; nor what they are, except—dentists."

the Chidester brothers; nor what they are, except—dentists."
"Dentists!" I exclaimed.
"Yes, dentists. They are traveling from place to place in their own carriage and practicing as they go. They enjoy traveling, and like to study the country and the people, you know. They have two offices at Tomlinson's, but they drive out into the country and call, and they will go to any one who sends for them. It is very convenient, now isn't it?"

"I think you are right," observed Mr. Ieming. Susie's escort, and the very juict assistant of Mr. Brown, our drug-quiet assistant of Mr. Brown, our druggist,

Mr. Heming had been a stranger a year before this, but he had come to Meadowside well recommended. Besides, he was so very plain, it would never have paid him to be anything but "eminently respectable."
"Of course I am right!" I cried. "Why, these men may be part of a gang of burglars, instead of gentlemen or men of honest and honorable calling."
"I should think you would feel timid as it is," remarked Susie, with a glance round the room. We were eating fruit in the dining room, where the sideboard and buffet was crowded with silver and pretty things.

"Where do you keep all these?" ask-ed Mr. Heming. "You surely do not leave them exposed in this way during he nights!

the nights!"

"Oh, no, indeed. They are all carried up into mother's room. Mine is next to it. It is a terrible nuisance, and if they were mine I should just leave them here. The house is safe enough. The boys are in the nursery and the servants in the stitc. But I like to be alone. Dear me, I don't think I could stand it without a few hours to myself. Listen! That's the way it is from morning until night. Just excuse me while I settle them."

Stale and Mr. Heming were ready to take leave and waiting under the hall lamp.

"I believe this will be a match," I thought, as I kissed Susie. "And really" carrying on the same thought as I went slowly up stairs again, "I don't see why it would not be a good thing. Susie is certainly a quiet, pretty little thing! And he is not half such a fright as I thought him. There was quite a glow in his eyes to-night. Usually he is as dull as ditchwater. So much like those everlasting Chidester brothers."

Two weeks later a party of the young people came out to spend the last evening of my loneliness with me. Father and mother were coming home the next day, and I was heartily glad of it. Jim was in Boston finishing his trip with some college friends. Among my guests of the evening were Susie Brown and Mr. Heming, Mollie Hayes and one of the Chidester brothers.

The weal stayed late, Mr. Heming and Susie were the first to leave, and Mollie and the Chidester the last. After they had crossed the doorstep I saw him pause and glance back at the hall and the stairway. It was a peculiar and the Chidester the last, After they had crossed the doorstep I saw him pause and glance back at the hall and the stairway. It was a peculiar and the stairway. It wa searching giance, and gave me a chily sensation of fear and dread.

Under the effect of that last giance, however, I had all the silver gathered up most carefully and packed in several baskets, and I concluded to sleep in mother's room instead of my own. Moreover, I opened the doors between the nursery and our rooms. I was not at all mindful of the delights of utter loneliness. I went back and forth several times to the tumbled beds in the nursery, envying the rosy sleepers, and it was late, indeed, before I joined them. Almost instantly, it seemed to me, I was broad awake again, and looking straight before me at the terrible, terrible sight.

There was a light in the room—a pale, uncertain, flickering light which stream-

"Burglars!" beat my frightened heart.
"The Chidester brothers!" came choking into my tightened throat.

I had too much sense to move or

I had too much sense to move or scream. Hay still as death, only drawing long, even breaths as if sound in sleep, and using my eyes for all they were worth. The shadows on the ceiling showed that things were being taken up and put down—our silver!—by gigantic hands, but all other outlines were so confused I could distinguish nothing.

Suddenly I heard a sound—a sound which filled me with sickening dread. The boys were awake—were moving—were calling me.

The burglar sprang to his feet, light and noiseless as a breath and stood poised and ready, his back toward me, there came the quick patter of little feet. He turned—his lamp fiared up, In the glass opposite, above the mask, which had doubtless slipped as he sprang up, I saw the face of the "eminentity respectable" Mr. Heming!

Involuntarily I uttered a sharp cry. Then, I closed my eyes and felt myself sinking away into helpless, hopeless terror. But the door of my room flew open with a bang, I heard Jack shout and Nutty scream; a rustle, a thud, a pistol shot, confused voices, trampling of feet, and tremendrous pounding and kleking on the porch.

I sprang out of bed, and the chaos began to resolve itself into some kind of order. Jack and Nutty were telling me that there was a carriage at the door the burglar was gone through the window and evidently into the hands of his enemies, for above the confusion down and evidently into the hands of his enemies, for above the confusion down and evidently into the hands of his enemies, for above the confusion down and evidently into the hands of his enemies, for above the confusion down and evidently into the hands of his enemies, for above the confusion down and evidently into the hands of his enemies, for above the confusion down and evidently into the hands of his enemies, for above the confusion down and evidently into the hands of his enemies, for above the confusion down and evidently into the hands of his enemies, for above the confusion down and evidently that the confusion down and evidently into the hands of his

He marched me to my room and called nurse.

"O, Jim, one moment, please! Where did you come from? And who are the Chiedesters?"

"First-rate fellows—my class, you know. They telegraphed me.

A GREAT many people feel themselves gradually failing. They don't know just what is the matter, but they suffer from a combination of indescribable aches and pains, which each month seem to grow worse. The only sure remedy known that will counteract this feeling and restore perfect health is Brown's Iron Bitters. By rapid assimilation it purifies the blood, drives out disease, gives health and strength to every portion reached by the circulatory system, renews wasted tissues and restores robust health and strength.
